Interaction, play and learning

Standing at the same level as others promotes interaction and play.

By using a tray, specific learning objectives can also be achieved with easier communication.

Wellbeing

Standing helps to improve self-esteem, confidence and alertness.

It can also lead to a better sleep pattern and increased responsiveness.

Bone Development

Weight bearing through standing or walking helps increase bone density and aids formation of the hip joint at an early age.

Improved Motion

Standing allows muscles to stretch fully which leads to improved range of motion while reducing spasticity and also helps prevent contractures.

Internal Systems

Standing improves breathing by allowing the diaphragm more room to expand. Breathing in and out more deeply increases oxygen intake which in turn leads to improved circulation and better blood pressure.

Through a combination of factors standing aids digestion, improved bowel function and provided better urinary drainage.
